

STOP LITTERING

Companion Animal Advocates (CAA) is an all-volunteer, non-profit, organization, located in Northern New Jersey, dedicated to keeping pets and their families together. CAA is making a difference in our community by pro-actively addressing the day to day issues that every pet owner faces. CAA has initiated the “STOP LITTERING” campaign to inform pet owners of both the importance of spaying and neutering their pets, as well as how to find affordable options for these procedures.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Why should I have my pet spayed or neutered?

Spaying or neutering your pet has numerous health benefits for the animal, and is paramount to controlling pet overpopulation. Every year, already crowded shelters get inundated with new puppies and kittens. Some will find homes, some will not. Many will be euthanized simply because there are too many of them.

- 🐾 Over its lifetime, your cat or dog can have many babies. A female pet that is not spayed can have over 100 babies; and male pets can literally father thousands. Everyone of us must spay or neuter our pets to help reduce the number of unwanted pets that are euthanized every day.
- 🐾 Spaying females reduces or eliminates the risk of mammary gland tumors, ovarian and/or uterine cancer, especially if done before the first heat cycle. Spaying eliminates the heat cycle, thereby making females less attractive to roaming males.
- 🐾 Neutering males greatly reduces or eliminates the risk of testicular cancer and can decrease incidents of prostate cancer as well. Neutering decreases the desire for males to roam.
- 🐾 Spaying or neutering may decrease certain undesirable behaviors, such as spraying and marking or aggressiveness.
- 🐾 Spaying or neutering reduces the likelihood of “roaming”, which can result in the impregnation of females as well as risk of injury by car or other animals.
- 🐾 Spaying or neutering helps prevent pet overpopulation.

When should I have my pet spayed or neutered?

Kittens or puppies can be spayed or neutered as young as two months old (or two pounds); however, veterinarians have different guidelines, so it is best to check with the veterinarian who will be doing the procedure. Most veterinarians will recommend that a female pet be spayed before entering her first heat, which generally occurs around six months of age.

Having my pet spayed or neutered is very expensive. Are there low cost options?

New Jersey offers various low-cost spay/neuter programs for qualified participants. In addition, many non-profit organizations offer low-cost spay/neuter programs without any limitations. With all of the programs that follow, program funding can be an obstacle, so you may be required to be wait-listed, or follow-up at certain times during the year. It is imperative that you pay attention to these timelines, as the program benefits and reduced expense (not to mention the benefit to your pet) is well worth the extra effort. CAA is always available to help you navigate through these programs and find one that works best for you and your pet.

Does the low-cost option mean lower standards of care?

NO! All of the options that are listed above are offered through local veterinarian practices that are fully licensed and meet or exceed all the appropriate professional and health department guidelines.

What exactly is the spay or neuter procedure?

Spaying a female pet is a major abdominal surgery where the pet's ovaries and uterus are removed. The uterus is also removed to insure that it does not become a source of infection over a period of time.

Neutering a male pet is a surgery where the doctor makes an incision in front of the scrotum and through that incision accesses each testicle. The fibrous coverings of the testicles are incised and each testicle is removed after securely ligating the blood vessels that attach to each testicle.

With the current economic crisis, will these programs still be available?

All of the programs, including the NJ State Low Cost Spay Neuter Programs, are funded through donations or revenue; therefore, they rely heavily on the public's generosity and support. It is our hope that people will continue to appreciate the importance of these programs and the value they provide to the community.

How can I help?

You can help by having your pet spayed or neutered! You can spread the word of the importance of spaying and neutering your pet, and the profound impact that this action will have on lowering the number of unnecessary euthanasias that are happening on a daily basis. You can donate to CAA or any of the other non-profit organizations listed above to help sustain these valuable programs.
